The company is developing its flagship Gabanintha Vanadium Project in Western Australia.

The company's executive team intends to visit China in early 2018

Australian Vanadium Ltd (ASX:AVL) will be represented by a consultant in meetings in China during the first two weeks of December with new and existing contacts in the vanadium sector.

The company recently appointed Mastermines to assist the company with an Asia focused relationship and marketing strategy.

Meetings are aimed at building relationships for future supply chains and paving the way for more focused visits with the Australian Vanadium executive team early in 2018.

The visit includes meetings with the vanadium electrolyte supplier for the world's largest battery currently under construction.

Visits are also planned with associations and researchers together with vanadium related enterprises and professionals within the battery and chemical sectors.

The company wants to produce a vanadium product marketable all over the world

Vincent Algar, managing director, said: "As we move towards project development at Gabanintha in Australia we are seeking to understand the potential customers and their product requirements.

"We aim to value-add in Australia and provide a desirable product for both the Chinese markets and other parts of the world, giving us the best chance of making a profitable mining venture for our shareholders."
